Life in the Celestial Empire-Seene in a Chinese City.

The special correspondent of the London Times in China gives the following account of what he saw in a Chinese city:

Let us walk down "the Street of Everlast-ing Prosperity," the Regent-street of the north suburb. At its entrance is a crowd of Chinamen, which, constantly renewed from dawn to sunset, stands gaping through a gateway at the headquarters, horses picketed in a large courtyard. Foreing our way through these unsavory Celestials, we find curselves in a small square occupied by the "cel-pie" and "baked potato" men of the place. Your working-man dines in the street, and this square is a favorable al fresco restaurant. Li, on our right, deals in meat pies. He has a small chargoal fire below his oven, and in a trice his pare is compounded and cooked before the public. Ho, by his side, supplies vegetable diet, turnips, onions, pumpkins, yams, cut into small slices and served in the water wherein they are boiled. Here is a man with sweetstuff, pastry and "tuck." There another with fruit-grapes penches, lotas fruit, water melons, apples and pears. All tastes are supplied. But even in dining the ineradicable love of the Chinaman dining the ineradicable love of the Chinaman for gembling is evinced. Every one of these dealers has a box like a dice-box, in which twenty small sticks are placed. Two of these sticks are prizes, the remainder blanks.

Each portion of food is supposed to be worth ten cash, and on staking one cash every comer may try his luck. From morning to night is the rattle of these sticks to be heard in the square as the dealers invite their custamers; from morning to taght may the Chinaman be seen yielding to the invitation flere is an old fellow, a "bargee" on the river. He has but two cash, which he stakes, and loses one after the other. His face is tueful, and his belly empty, so we give him ten cash, with which he may insure the meal he covets. He takes the cash, but, instead of buying his foed, he recommences to gamof buying his foed, he recommences to gamble for it. One cash after another is drawn from him, and when he loses his last he from him, and when he loses his last he walks away dincrless. The fishmonger is pernambulating about. His fish, in a shallow round wooden bowl, lie gasping in three or fur inches of water. Here are cels, brown and silver, large fat muddy carp, soles, and a speckled fish like a trout, and of much the sime flavor. At an open cook-shop Chinese artists are preparing the dinner of the day. The favorite dish is a stew composed of chopped pork, onlong, seaweed, shrimps and eggs. We taste, but its flavor is by no means agreenble to the western palate.

And now, in a quiet seeluded nook is a good-humored laughing crowd, eajoying the feats of a juggler. A wonderful man? He takes two pieces of sharp wire a couple of feet long, inserts them in his nostrils and passes them thence down his throat. There is no deception, for he open his mouth wide, and we see the wires down his gullet. Then he takes two leaden bullets, one the si e of an ordinary muske -hall, the other weighing twelve ounces. He swallows the little one first. With many contortions he brings them up again, and the small one is the firs t re app a. He draws the wires back through his nose and spits blood. A shower of cash rewards this feat. Then he swallows a swoord, crams jointed sticks in his ears and eyes, and performs a variety of tricks too numerous to be detailed. numerous to be detailed.

We enter a perfamor a shop, full of knick-knacks and necessaries for my lady's toilet. Pearl powder is made up in neat little packages, and with rouge and paints of various hues. Lotions for the complexion, perfumes, dyes for the bair, and here, in a corner, "thine incomparable oil, Macossar." A barber is plying his trade. He shaves the head, combs and plaits the tail, and extracts wax from the ears. The latter operation is evidently a favorite with the Celestats. Alast "false tails" are common here as they are "false tails" are common here as they are said to be in England. The shop is full of them at $1 the half dozen. A distinguished officer of irregulars bought a few to make a plume for his belmet. A "curio" stall conplume for his belimet. A "curio" stall contains very ordinary china at very exorbitant prices. Among its prizes are a common English bottle, price half a dollar, and an English earthenware plate, with "Swiss scenes" painted thereon, for which double that amount is demanded. Here, also, are small boxes, labeled "Superior Congreve matches, without smell or sulphur." They would cost a halforency at home their role. would cost a halfpenny at home; their price at Tien tain is two and one-half pence. We come to a linen draper's, and find Manchester and American goods—linen, cotton and callen. Here is blue stuff for the comchester and American goods for the com-mon funics and trowsers. It is labeled "Manchester, John Pender & Co." By its side are calicoes, marked "Saunders," and in great abundance. The prices are 100 per cent, higher than at Shanghai. Immense quantities of Russian cloth, both red and blue, are to be found. printed cottons from the Manchester looms blue, are to be found in every shop. This cloth is of double width, thick and coarse. It is said at wenty-five shillings a yard, the price being fixed by the Russian Government. Coming by land all the way from Nijni Novgorod, such a price can never pay; but the government is careless as to profit, for this cloth forms the principal object of burter for tea and silk.

for this cloth forms the principal object of barter for tea and silk.

I have seen enough, however, to feel satisfied that the opening of Tien-tain to foreign commerce will encourage an enormous trade in all the main branches of English manufacture. The crowd at our heels laugh as we enter a pawnbroker's shop. It is full of depositors, old clothes being the principal articles in pledge. We ask the head man to see the establishment. He would be delighted, but it is against rule. He deeply regrets that he must refuse our Majesties, but his orders are explicit. After a little pressing he yields, and we are conducted through one court after another, the buildings containing all that man can imagine, from pocket-handkerchiefs to junks' auchors. The goods may be pledged for thirty moons (two years and a half), when they are said, if unredeemed. The rate of interest is twelve per cent, per annum. Here is a large ice-house, very long, very deep, very well drained. The lee is in blocks full two feet thick, and gives abundant evidence of a severe winter in this district. Returning home weenter a tea shop. The "cheering" beverage is contained in a large brass kettle, a brass butterfly with extended wings on its spout. We drink, are retreshed, and bid adieu to "the Street of Everlasting Projectiy."

A STONE-CRUSHING MACHINE. -- At the great A Stone-causing Machine.—At the great from works of Creusot a machine has been invented for crushing stone. The empresses blocks of granite placed in this crusher are reduced instantaneously to pieces at any given size. This machine, which will supersede the breaking of stone by hand for the meading of roads, will, it is thought, be found equally useful in crushing iron stone for the biast furnaces.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL. Financial Affairs.

The financial feeling and the tone of Monctary matters have improved since our last weekly review. Confidence has augmented. but the Money demand has increased, and the stock of Currency is now materially less than it was last Thursday morning. Money matters have, of course, been very close, and though the Discount-houses have been doing a little first-class Paper of short date for special customers at 10@12 per cent., the greater part of the wants have remained unsupplied. In the street rates rule at 2@3 per cent, a month, with little doing, as there are few lenders there. The present condition of affairs is as good as could be expected under the circumstances, though they are still unsettled on account of the peculiar state of politics in other sections.

Eastern Exchange has declined, and is steady now at % premium on New York. Gold has become lower, and is firm, but not active at M@1 premium selling rate. New Orleans Exchange is in fair request for Sight, with a very limited supply, at 1/2 pre-

In Time-bills the transactions have been few; rates ruling about 12 per cent, for those on the East and South, Uncurrent Money improved until the close of last week, but for a day or two past has been heavier. Our

In St. Louis, Currency is in small supply at 2 discount selling, and Monetary matters are close. Eastern Exchange is very scarce there; the Bankers drawing moderately for their customers at 2, and for outsiders at 4 premium; while other dealers obtain 5 without difficulty.

In Chicago, all kinds of business are very dull. Currency is accumulating there, and the Bankers know not what to do with it. Eastern Exchange is very scarce, and rules at 6@7 premium.

We have had no mail advice from New Orleans for several days. The times there look financially unfavorable, and the failure of Cobb, Martin & Co., commission merchants, with branch concerns in New York, Mobile and Louisville, will have a bad effect there, as they were an old and eminentlyrespectable firm. Money is very close, indeed; the Banks extending few accommodations; and New York Sight Cheeks rule at Mass discount.

The following are the Imports and Exports during the twenty-four hours ending yesterday at noon:

Imports—Apples, 208 barrels; Barley, 729 lushels; Butter, 109 packages; Corn, 963 Coffee, 292 bags; Flour, 1,953 barrels; Hay, 217 bales; Hogs, 0,905 head; Lard, 18 barrels and 50 kegs; Molasses, 75 barrels; Malt, 265 bushels; Oais, 2,987 bushels; Pork and Bacon, 14 hogsheads; 59 barrels and 48,000 records. pounds; Potatoes, 4 barrels; Rye, 115 bushels; Sugar, 104 hogsheads; Salt, 596 bar-rels; Wheat, 960 bushels; Whisky, 880

Friday's Herald thus speaks of last week's New York Bank-statement: The Bank-statement compares as follows with that of last Monday:

Lottes. Specie. Circulation. Deposits. Nov. 24...$190.018,461 18.709.073 8.065.442 74.025,709 Dec. 21..... 10.502.450 15.031.102 6.005.944 89,724,715 Therease. $217,611 102,498

It was hardly expected that the Banks would show a decrease of Specie, as a re-mittance from California arrived the day their previous average was made up. It must be presumed that the previous loss had been heavier than was supposed. Some Gold, also, went last week to strengthen the Banks of New England and of this State. We are inclined to think that our Banks will have to abandon the idea of carrying New England through the present crisis.

The increase in Bank Loans and Deposits The increase in Bank Loans and Deposits is unprecedented. It proves two things—first, that the Banks are taithfully carrying out the promise they gave the Merchants ten days ago; and secondly, that the Merchants are returning the compliment by leaving their Money in Bank on deposit. It will be noticed that the increase of Deposits is nearly as great as the increase in Loans, though the remittances of Coin to the interior tell pegings the Deposit column. This terior tell against the Deposit column. This Statement is, on the whole, calculated to strengthen confidence, and, combined with the news of the Union efforts at Washington, to impart a more cheerful feeling to mercan-
